Woodland Agricultural Services provides native plant seed and agricultural services to land owners for wildlife, bio-fuel, and the many government cost share conservation practices. Our native warm season grasses can be utilized to extend forage availability during the summer months when cool season grasses are in decline. We are experienced in site preparations, weed control, no-till planting and site maintenance particularly during the establishment period. Our experience also includes herbicide selection compatible with the type of crop being established. An array of modern, well maintained, and specialized equipment including sprayers, no till drills, site prep and maintenance equipment offer the best possible chance of a successful seeding.
